Excerpt: . . . 111. 2 American Journal of International Law, vol. ix, No. 1, Jan. 1915, p. 167, Editorial Comment. Cf. British and Foreign State Papers, vol. cii, p. 591. rights and duties of neutral Powers in Naval War (No. 13) is liberally drawn upon for guidance. It is to be remembered that this Hague Convention was not of itself binding on the belligerents, as not all of them were parties to. it. 173. These Rules and Regulations are said in the Proclamation to be issued by the President in virtue of the sovereignty which the United States exercises in the land and waters of the Canal Zone. Such sovereignty is of course unlimited. Nevertheless, in drawing up these regulations, the President had to take care that they should not in any way be contrary to the obligations to Great Britain entered into by the United States in the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty. It will generally be found that they are in conformity with it. In some cases the Rules of the Proclamation are in the same terms as the Treaty. There is nothing in the Proclamation to interfere with the principle of equality among nations 1 in the use of the Canal, which it was the principal object of the Treaty to secure; nor does the Proclamation seem unduly to restrict the freedom of nations in their use of the Canal. The limitations in Rule 10 as to the number of vessels of war of any one nation,...
