Excerpt: .the benefit of the gentleman who has just spoken, that various companies now use a catechism. It is my practice, for one. I have a printed catechism which deals particularly with the train rules, the questions being numbered correspondingly with the rules themselves. There are also questions somewhat in the nature of a. problem-- Under certain circumstances what would you do? That method has been criticised and objected to by some experienced men as leading to the committing of the rules by rote and the answering of these questions in rather school-boy fashion. I do not see the force of that objection. Still, that objection has been made. It will give me pleasure to forward such a catechism as I have prepared and used, to any gentleman who desires to have a copy. Mr. Mccoy: The New York Central have adopted two forms of...
